An aerial photograph of a dense tropical forest. The canopy is thick and layered, with various shades of green and some brownish-orange patches indicating different tree species or perhaps some dry foliage. Several palm trees are visible, their fronds clearly defined against the denser canopy. The overall impression is one of a vast, untouched natural space.

A veterinary procedural drama with heart: Dr. Kate Barton and her family-led team save the lives of animals in the beautiful countryside. Juggling love and hardship, Kate must learn to heal herself along the way.

BARTON VET

Six months after her father's death, Dr. Kate Barton finds herself stretched thin after taking over his country vet clinic. Luckily, her family is right in there with her: her fierce yet loving Clinic Manager mother, Mirabel, her empathetic brother with Down Syndrome, David, and her fun-loving found-family member, Vet Tech Ollie. But despite all they do to keep the business going, it soon becomes evident that the practice is in great financial distress. Kate shoulders the brunt of the responsibility, and her job is made tougher as one of the only professional women in this rural enclave. Amid all this, Kate must train up a new vet, navigate the unexpected arrival of a young woman full of spirit but lacking direction, and explore a – potentially messy – renewed chance at love. Kate's father was a legend in the area. Now Kate not only finds his vet boots tough to fill, but also his role as the rock of the Barton family.

Based on a true story: A notorious criminal serving time for spectacular heists joins a prison program as his ticket to freedom, only to discover that the hardest escape is from himself.

THE MAN FROM MILAN

From his first theft as a teenager, Raffaele has lived at full speed: spectacular bank robberies, luxury, beautiful women. Then, a 27-year sentence. In prison, he finds a possible way out: a rehabilitation program that forces him to meet his victims, hear their stories, and face the consequences of his crimes. Faking remorse? Easy enough for a lifelong manipulator. But Veronica, the beautiful and intelligent psychologist leading the program, sees through him. Still, she chooses to believe there may be more beneath the surface – and gets dangerously close to him. Moving between past and present, prison and his high-octane criminal career, the process forces Raffaele to confront not only his victims, but also himself. Because behind his bravado lies a grief he has never faced. What began as another con becomes the start of an unexpected journey toward redemption, love, and the question of whether everyone deserves a second chance.

A heartwarming, innovative, and witty look at how babies are made: When 37-year-old biologist Blanca takes on a job at a fertility clinic, she is forced not only to get to the bottom of the needs and risks of her clients, but her own, as well.

IN VITRO

CREATION OF HAPPINESS

At age 37, the brilliant biologist Blanca finds herself dissatisfied with her career as a researcher. A new job at a fertility clinic is supposed to give her more meaning. There, she meets Héctor, an outstanding, but all too rational embryologist whose brutal frankness often scares clients away. The clinic's boss, Andreu, hopes Blanca's empathetic nature will outweigh Héctor's harshness. Surely, she will reel in more clients while improving the clinic's public image. But sometimes, her idealism gets in the way of business. Blanca is increasingly confronted with ethical dilemmas that test her principles and beliefs, not the least of which being: Is it right to satisfy the desire to have children, no matter what? At the same time, Blanca's private life also comes under pressure: Caught between her partner's wish to start a family, societal expectations, and her daily experiences at the clinic, Blanca increasingly begins to question her own idea of motherhood.

SHATTERED BONDS

Six teenagers – Andrea, Leah, Dana, Alexander, Nikola, and Deyan – form an extraordinary bond with their new teacher, Yavora. At first, she seems unremarkable, just another face in the faculty. But under her guidance, their grades improve, their camaraderie deepens, and they transform into kinder, more empathetic individuals. Their closeness, however, alarms the kids’ parents, who see Yavora as a threat. As the pressure to break them apart grows, the teens cling to her, viewing Yavora as their only refuge in an increasingly hostile world. Through the lens of the six teens’ personal and family struggles, their stories reach a climax on the day Yavora invites them to meet her in a park near the school. But the meeting, meant to bring solace, leads to devastation as they’re torn from their last source of unconditional support.

ARE YOU READY TO FACE YOUR DEMONS?

In their fight against an experimental underwater drilling campaign in Polynesia, nine activists are sailing through the test area. After a mysterious underwater tremor and a strange mist rising from the sea, they wake up on a lush but unfamiliar island with no memory of their shipwreck. At first, survival seems possible: The island offers food, shelter, and fresh water. But when one of them vanishes during the very first night and is found murdered at dawn, fear takes hold. Some believe the illegal drilling campaign has awakened the wrath of ancient gods – especially as each night brings unsettling phenomena echoing the castaways’ pasts. As paranoia spreads and buried conflicts resurface, the group fractures. Whatever is after them, its greatest weapon may be the darkness already inside them.

A PLACE CALLED HOME

The German Empire, 1911. It all begins with the free spirit of Lisette Winter, who rebels against her bourgeois family. Her mother Dora tries to marry her off to a baron, but Lisette wants to become a fashion designer to find happiness. One hundred years later, Lisette's great-granddaughter Maya wants to learn about the women in her family. The more she finds out about Lisette, the more impressed she is. However, not everything fits the ideal image. In 1938, Lisette still mourns her late husband Emile, whose death in 1915 shattered her dreams. While her son is enthusiastic about Hitler, her daughter Charlotte secretly helps her Jewish friends. When Charlotte falls in love with Paul, who is active in the resistance, her mother fears that her own fate will be repeated and makes a grave decision... No matter how different these women are, they are united by their search for their own way – against all odds.

They face dismissal when consultants audit the department, until a lucky mix-up reroutes them to an advanced training program. Stranded on an autonomous bus, they find themselves on an absurd journey straight into professional disasters, including hospital mayhem, a mini revolution on forklifts, and an ill-advised attempt to enter heaven.

ALPINE JUSTICE

Nestled between dramatic mountain peaks, the picturesque city of Innsbruck may look idyllic, but the Grubers know that even in the heart of the Alps, crime never takes a holiday. The family is well-known with the locals: Grandfather Hannes is a retired cop, his daughter Fanny is a sharp, highly skilled Chief Inspector, and her daredevil son Tobi followed in both of their footsteps by becoming a police officer himself. But their shared passion for the job comes with a small side of family drama: Each of them has their own quirks, their own investigative style, and certainly their own opinion of how things should be done. What unites them though, is their love for one another and an unwavering sense of justice.

But in the end, they enjoy each other's company more than they'd like to admit. Micha's new partner Luisa proves enigmatic. Ida is delighted: Her best friend, Miriam, is staying at Winterstein School for three months. On Miriam's first day, Max gets the magical owl, Muriel, and to her surprise, Miriam also receives a magical animal, the energetic tarsier Fitzgerald. Max and Muriel quickly form a bond, and the perceptive little owl soon notices that Max may have deeper feelings for his best friend, Leonie, than he is ready to admit. Meanwhile, Ida discovers that the desperate headmaster has been keeping a crucial secret from the students: Winterstein School is about to be sold! Ida and her class see the upcoming school challenge as their last chance to save it. However, Miriam is shocked to learn that her former school is also competing in the challenge. Feeling like an outsider among her old classmates, she confides only in Fitzgerald. Caught between old friends and new ones, Miriam must choose where she truly belongs.

JUST CALL ME FRIDA

Samuel is eleven and barely ever goes outside. Too risky! He prefers a life that's small, safe, and carefully controlled. After being seriously ill for a long time, he's terrified of getting sick again. Then Frida crashes into his world. She's loud, cheerful – and claims to be the "Little Death" in training: "Just call me Frida!" Her mission? To figure out what life really means. And somehow, Samuel is a crucial part of the program. Worst. Case. Ever. Samuel wants nothing more than to send his unwanted shadow packing. But Frida refuses to leave his side. Which means one thing: Samuel has to go outside. Together, they stumble into one adventure after another – and little by little, Samuel rediscovers how it feels to be brave, curious, and fully alive in the moment.

PUMUCKL'S BIG MIX-UP

This summer, Pumuckl and Master Eder have a lot going on: a tortoise, a trip to the countryside, and neighbor Burke's birthday! Perhaps too much – because with all of this going on, the two of them are barely able to make time to really talk to each other. And when a huge misunderstanding arises, everything changes between them and their tranquil world threatens to fall apart!

Four football talents. One dream. No guarantees: Tackling issues of class, race, and inequality, CHAMELEON shows that the complexities of friendship, the pain of exclusion, and the desire to fit in are shared by all teens, no matter where they are from.

CHAMELEON

Leon and Kamal, two best friends from Oslo’s east side, dream of becoming professional football players. On their side of town though, everything is more difficult: Their team can’t even afford a football field to play on. When Leon finds out about try-outs at the rich west-side club, he and Kamal jump at the chance. But only Leon’s family manage to come up with the money for the club fees while Kamal has to stand on the sidelines. On the west side, Leon enters a world of privilege and fierce competition. As the only minority player, he struggles to fit in with his teammates, who have grown up with every advantage. Among them are Amund and his sister Billie – players raised with opportunity yet burdened by relentless pressure to be the best. While Kamal fights to keep his dream alive with limited resources back home, Leon, Billie, and Amund wrestle with their own fears of failure, identity, and expectation, navigating challenges their privilege can’t shield them from.

Hiding her from parents and suspicious locals, they search for a lost magical stone that can help her get back home. While Catarina struggles to adapt to modern life, their efforts lead to comic chaos and lots of hijinks. But when Aodhán uncovers secrets about Catarina’s lineage that stretch across centuries and two sinister figures arrive, seeking the totem for their own gain, their rescue mission becomes a literal race against time! As friendships deepen and a romance blossoms between Catarina and Aodhán, the group faces an impossible decision that may unravel history itself.

SOMEBODY'S LYING

Every year, a group of teens and their families gather for a dreamy summer in the Norwegian village of Sund. But when one of the girls, Linnea, vanishes, the dream quickly turns into a quiet nightmare. One year later, secrets surface. Friendships unravel. Someone is lying. By end of summer, someone will be broken, someone will be found murdered, and someone... will have gotten away with it. For now. A twisted, emotional, and binge-worthy youth drama. Each episode peels back the layers of a different character — teens and adults alike — exposing buried truths, forbidden love, and dark family legacies. There's a lot of secrets here at Sund.
